Humanities' Oracle

A letter to every Dreamer

Hey you! Your world differs from that of others because you are forever trying to explore more, dash on the road not taken and you are this person, committed to growing. You just cannot exist for the sake of existing because you have an eye for more.

At times, people are going to make you believe that you are not worth it, you are over ambitious and an over achiever. May be you are, but this desire to keep learning is something you must forever hold on to. It's not been easy for you and it is going to be even harder ahead because dreaming comes with a heavy price.

You have tasted failures before you could carve out this path towards your dreams. You still do remind yourself that 'dreams don't come with an expiry date.' Every new day brings endless possibilities and you are overjoyed to imagine how it feels to reach the stars.

When most people give up and accept life as it is, you spend sleepless nights over moving an inch closer to your dreams. Perhaps, you are slightly eccentric but you'll never take it as never. Every impossibility has a fair chance of being wooed by you, and turn into a possibility. Dream on for dreams are enchanting and pump into your punctured souls- a ray of hope.

While this period is a difficult one and your dreams have become static like your life, do remember that better days are on their way and for that you'll be needing a lot of zeal and passion. Keep alive those dreams but for now, let it all sink in. Feel whatever is coming to you and accept it, not as a stepping stone but as a part of you. 'Once a dreamer, always a warrior' yes that's what you are and this all is a part of a great plan. Just hold on you beautiful dreamer. This too shall pass.
