Humanities' Oracle

Write a happy story in the shortest possible way, asked the teacher. "My father will receive me at the bus stop today", wrote the soldier's five-year-old son.

(The son was full of gratitude for the day when his father was at home)- Living in present is what matters the most and how is the idea of living in the present with gratitude?

You may find people dwelling in the past and cribbing. Such people must tell themselves, "I love my past but I find joy in focusing on here and now". No matter how fascinating things were, it's over now, so be thankful for it and move ahead with hope in your heart. Gratitude makes our lives lively and full of contentment. We may never be able to get everything but we can be surely thankful for what we have. We must understand that it's not happiness that brings us gratitude but it's gratitude that brings us happiness.

One should always aspire high but shouldn't forget to count one's blessings. Life is all about moving ahead but in a state of happiness.

Start and end your day by thinking of the blessings you have in life.

Tip: Challenge yourself to spend 24 hours without complaining.
